When standing in El Paso, Texas, you're closer to Los Angeles than to Texarcana on the other side of the State. When standing in Brownsville, Texas you are 475 miles from Mexico City, but almost 800 miles from Amarillo. There's a lot to explore here.

The second largest canyon in the U.S., Palo Duro, is found here, a fact not well known, even in Texas.

Football is the State religion, oil is the lymph gland, cotton and peanuts, along with cattle are the foundation. NASA, metroplexes, the Big Thicket, a technological Silicone Valley around Austin, the capitol, all fascinating in and of themselves.

At dusk 20 million bats emerge from Braken Cave near San Antonio every night. Texas has become an important wine producing state! The well known and the little known converge to keep viewers engrossed and entranced.
